

ADDING ENERGY FROM THE INSIDE OUT

When oil and gas producer Enerplus talks about adding energy, they're not just talking about the kind you put in your gas tank. Enerplus people bring energy to their work – and in an industry that measures itself by how much energy it gets out of the ground, Enerplus is showing just how much energy it can put back into the broader community.

As the company has grown over the last 25 years, so too has its commitment to corporate responsibility.

It starts with people who do business in a way that earns respect for what they accomplish – and how they accomplish it. It's more than policies and rules. It's about treating people with dignity and respect. It's about personal accountability and making the right choice when it comes to health and safety, the environment, being good neighbours, and giving back.

Employees here add their energy in a lot of different ways. There's an enthusiasm that comes from working on world-class projects. There's a can-do attitude in offices and spirited debates in the hallways. Enerplus people look at energy assets and ask "what if" rather than focusing on "what is". They believe in collaboration and teamwork, which amplifies their strengths.

"We" is the operative word here and Enerplus employees give back. In the last few weeks alone, Enerplus people have rolled up their sleeves and helped build a house for Habitat for Humanity, supported the Terry Fox Run, rappelled down a 30-storey building for Easter Seals, and raised more than $230,000 – and about $1.3 million over the last six years – for the Alberta Children's Hospital Foundation through an annual high profile poker tournament.

So where are they applying their energy next? The Enerplus United Way campaign is just around the corner.

Roger Knull

Joarcam Field Operator

What do you do at Enerplus?

We're focused on optimizing our existing operations in mature fields by using new technologies. But the most important thing is that we all return home safely at the end of the day.

What do you see as your responsibility to the community?

Enerplus is really active in building relationships with communities and landowners. We hear good things about our approach. But sometimes the job calls for going above and beyond. One night, my colleagues and I found a woman unconscious and freezing in a stranded vehicle. We were fortunate enough to get her to the hospital in time.
